"The day of the fight I did everything in my power to get Costica in line for the fight, but I think that if there had been a chance to run away that day he would have done so. The fellow was just as strong as a bull, for I found if he had had the courage he could really have put up a good fight with Darcy. He was scared to death and when he entered the ring he was trembling and fell without hardly being touched. He made a miserable showing and, of course, it hurt the other contests to follow. Mr. Baker paid contests to follow had absolutely no kick coming whatever. If it had been in America, he would have been thrown out of the ring and not given a penny.

I put Darcy to his knees in the first round and I knew that I had a splendid chance to whip him had I gone along carefully, but I took too big a chance in the second round in swinging with him, with the result that he hit me on the jaw with one of his swings from the floor that laid me flat. He is not what I would call a clever fellow, although he has a peculiar style of his own which makes him dangerous at all times, and he is what you might call an awkward clever fellow. His blows are not powerful—that is, the straight ones, but some of his short joits have a lot of steam back of them, due to the fact that he has been accustomed to swinging the hammer in the blacksmith shop. Even the champlon boxer cannot always afford to take too big a chance in the ring. Many of them have been surprised at various times by going against dubs or unknown boxers without a reputation, sometimes with disastrous results. Kid Williams came near bumping into one of these experiences at Buffalo last week, when he met Dick Loadman, the Lockport bantamweight. They were matched for a ten-round contest and during one of he met Dick Loadman, the Lockport bantamweight. They were matched for a ten-round contest and during one of the mix-ups little Dick put over a haymaker that shook the champion from his feet to his head. It was a fierce contest from that time on until the end of the tenth round. Williams never battled harder in his life to save his title. Loadman has been battling around the middle west and east for the past three years and has met a number of good boys. It was not the first time he met Williams, however, as they fought a ten-round contest in Milwaukee. November 27, 1913. On this occasion Loadman came near hanging over one of his haymakers, but the Kidjust slipped his jaw enough to avoid the full force. After that swing, however, williams punished Loadman severely and had him very tired at the end of the tenth round. The chances are that the champion will be careful for see that he is in the best of condition when he meets boys of that class again. It also is possible that a twenty-round battle between these two will be arranged in the future to take place either down south or in one of the Pennsylvania towns. It is now up to Johnny Ertie to show what he can do with Dick Loadman.

Newport News now has won two and the sensational fielding of the visitors cost the locals several runs.

The fight fans who follow Frankie Conifrey in New York came near putting the Empire Athletic Club on the discard last week. They probably had been reading about the disturbances at the White-Welsh fight in Colorado and wanted to follow suit. Conifrey was boxing against Benny Leonard, the pride of the East Side in New York, and when it was apparent that Leonard was beating their man in the sixth round they started what developed into a good sized riot. Some of them claimed that it was due to the referee that the riot started, alleging that he had not been fair to Conifrey. They hurled pop bottles and chairs and everything they could lay their hands on into the ring and the wonder is that some of the people were not seriously injured. It happened that there were a few police there to quell the disturbance, but those present worked overtime and did everything in their power to stop the riot, which they finally did. It is just such methods that hurt the boxing game and it is to be regretted that anything like that should happen in New York. It is seldom that trouble of that kind has occurred in any of the large clubs there, and for the good of the game it is hoped that it will be the last one. The chances are that if the club had more policemen around the ring—at least, policemen in uniform at every corner—there would be no chance of starting trouble of that kind.

The batsman is not out on any kind of a fly with a runner on first base only, unless the fly is caught. An infield fly is a fair hit fly other than a line drive that can be handled by an infielder, but in order to have the batsman out automatically there must be runners on first and second with less than two out.

In their closing stages it is not likely that the present distinction enjoyed by the Pittsburgh and Washington clubs will be gained by any other combinations.

Nationals Head American League in Being Blanked.

CHICAGO LOSES BUT EIGHT

Pirates Fare Worst in National League, Being Blanked on 22 Occasions.

BY ERNEST J. LANIGAN.

No one as yet has suggested a fall series between the Pirates and the Nationals, but if these two clubs were to clash it would be a meeting between teams that lead their respective leagues in being dipped into the whitewash bucket. Also it would be a meeting between teams whose leaders are old friends and associates, Jimmy Callahan and Clarke Griffith having been to gether for a long space of time in Chi-two times and Griff's seventeen. The Cincinnati Reds have run into nineteer kalsominings, and the Arising Athlet-Sporting Editor Star:

Only one of the sixteen major league clubs has been blanked less than ten times this year. That club is Chicago, in the American League, the White Sox having been kept away from the plate in eight contests. In six of these games left-handers did the pitching, the lone northpaws to get runless decisions over the Rowlandites being Fred Beebe of the Indians and Joe Bush of the White Elephants. The first-named hurled his shut-out the day he was making his debut in the American League—June 26.

In the National League the teams hardest to blank have been Brooklyn and New York, the combinations led by those ex-Orioles, Robinson and McGraw, each having been presented with eleven strings of ciphers. Thus far there have been twenty-five more whitewashes in the National than in the American, the number of times each club has been kalsomined being given below:

Times Teams Have Been Blanked.

22-Pirates. 19-Reds.

17_Nationals, Cubs and Cardinals. 14-White Elephants and Browns.

13-Braves and Phillies. 12-Yankees. 11-Red Sox, Indians, Tigers, Superbas and Giants.

8-White Sox. In four of this year's "Chicago" games neither team was able to get a run, the Boston clubs figuring in all these controversies. In the American League the Red Sox and the Browns these controversies. In the American League the Red Sox and the Browns went seventeen stanzas on July 14 without getting a tally, and September 8 Carrigan's men and the Senators didn't sully the plate in a six-iming fracas. The National League's run-less draws lasted sixteen and five rounds, respectively, and were between the Braves and the Reds June 13, and between the Braves and the Phillies September 5.

The record major league shutout score of 28 to 0 has not been seriously threatened by any incident of the 1916 campaigns. Only three times have clubs run up double figures while denying their rivals tallies, all three of these games being recled off in the younger league. The White Sox downed the White Elephants May 20, 11 to 0, and that also was the score of the Browns' victory over Cleveland, August 12. The Indians July 29 took a 10 to 0 fail out of the Senators.

There have been a raft of 1 to 0 games in the majors this year, thirty-six cropping up in the National and twenty-one in the American. Every club except Detroit owns one or more of this variety of victories.

KIRKSIDE GOLF CLUB SHOWS UNUSUAL GROWTH IN MEMBERS

Has Long Waiting List in Year's Organization and One of the Best Courses in This Section.

When the Bannockburn Golf Club left the old course at Chevy Chase Circle to occupy the new grounds at Cabin John several members of the Bannockburn Club, not desiring to move their place of play as far away from their homes as the present location, decided to organize a club on the old grounds. Virtually all the members of the old organization had gone to the Cabin John course, leaving not more than a dozen players, and these men banded together and took over the lease of the ground the player to go for the green on the player to go for the green at 35. Bannockburn left the old course May 1, 1913, and about the middle of May T. A. Poole and C. C. Miller, Milo H. For the first few months of the young club's existence to be rather a short one to permit the player to go for the green on the slope of the middle of the green to the longest hole on the course lies in front. ## INTERESTING GOLF NOTES FROM THE LOCAL CLUBS

The Chevy Chase course is the venue of the Middle Atlantic team champlonships this year October 5 and 6. Teams from the twelve clubs in the Middle Atlantic Association will play. The home club will be able to put a strong aggregation in the field with Sambel Dajzell, W. R. Tuckerman, J. H. de Sibour and others who have been getting around the course in 80 this seasob.

Miss Dorothy Owen, one of the best of the woman players of the Chevy Chase Club, has returned to the city and is playing golf over the course. Jack Burgess, while he is very busy Jack Burgess, while he is very busy teaching, had time to get around the Chevy Chase course twice last week, registering rounds of 76 and 77. The Columbia course probably is the hardest to score low on in this part of the country. Par for the first nine is 37 and is not easy, for the first hole is rated at 4 and requires two good shots to get home, although now that the tee has been moved fifty yards forward it is a little easier than before. The sixth hole has been lengthened a few yards and it is no easy matter to obtain a five on the hole, for the green is well trapped. The eighth is one of the most difficult, requiring three well placed shots to get to the green. The par for the first nine holes is not an easy proposition.

The Columbia course rapidly is approaching perfection and now is almost ready for the staging of the annual fall initiation tournament. For the past week the players have been approaching to temporary greens as the regular putting surfaces have been in process of being top-freesed, and with a little rain will, no doubt, be in the best condition of the year when the date for the tourney rolls around. The announcements for the event are expected to be out the first of the coming week, although the tourney does not begin until October 19.

The case the finish is very close.

Announcement has been made that instead of only four of the Washington for the Washington Golf and Country Club will also play. This will be the second time in the history of local golf that all five of the paid players of the green time. Beckeft, Dave Burgess and Spencer will play Jack Burgess and Ittle rain will, no doubt, be in the best condition of the year when the date for the tourney rolls around. Emmons S. Smith, jr., the son of the president of the Columbia Country Club, who is one of the young "comers" of this section, had a score of $7 around the Columbia course last week, playing with McLeod, the pro.

Miss Pauline Lockett of the Chevy Chase Club, with eleven strokes on one hole, went around the long course one day last week in 102. She had the hardest part of the journey, the first nine holes, in 49, but with the one bad hole came back in 53.

The Chevy Chase course is the venue of the Middle Atlantic team champion ships this year October 5 and 6. Teams from the twelve clubs in the Middle Atlantic Association will play. The Howard Beckett of the Washington Golf and Country Club had a pair of 70's over the course last week. On one of his rounds he was playing with Charles H. Orme of the Columbia Country Club, and, although Orme was going well, the pace set by the pro was a little too fast for the man from Columbia.

The qualification round for the club championship ends today at the Wash-ington Golf and Country Club. The match rounds begin next week.

A cup has been presented to the members of the Washington Country Club turning in the lowest choice score between now and Thanksgiving day. This event usually is a very popular one, as some players are liable to get a par four hole in two, and as is ordinarily the case the finish is very close.

It is likely that the match will resolve itself into a question of the best putter, for practically all the men will play even through the fair green, and with the green a little rough the team which gets down the most of the reasonably short putts will win the match.

In the lower half of the club championship at Bannockburn T. J. W. Brown porbably will have a chance, to oppose Lee Crandall for the third ime this season. In the final of the Henry-Williams cup event Crandall beat Brown 2 up. In the upper half the present champion meets Cunningham, one of the best players of the club, and this match will test the champion's game, for his opponent is going very well just now and undoubtedly will give Beattle a battle. The upper half includes many of the best players of the club in Manley, Taylor, Cunningham and Beattle. Manley is a good example of persistence and practice in the game. In the past year he has been playing a great deal of golf, and his game has now reached the point where he asks odds of no one. PROFESSIONAL ERA ENDS WITH THE PRESENT WAR

Nothing Comparable to New Book in the Written Records of the

"Handbuch des Schachspiels" by Carl Schlechter is completed and the book nothing like it or comparable to it in the written record of chess. From the first slender collection of openings made by Von der Lasa, through revision this "book of books" in the chess plete and colossal history of the great period of professional chess just ended -it is almost a magnificent tombstone. For the day is here which witnesses the extermination of the professional chess master. Of that considerable body who depended upon chess as a sole means of support no longer than three years ago, only three "all wool" professionals remain upon the face of the globe—Capablanca and Marshall in this country and Blackbourne in England. Eight years of unstayed slaugter saw the practical annihilation of the buffalo; two years of the European war have been enough to drive the herd of chess masters, fostered through, seventy-five years of bitter struggle, herd of chess masters, fostered through seventy-five years of bitter struggle, to death or work. The scientific loss which the game has thus sustained is as evident as the Alps, but, happily, in this country as unimportant as Shooters hill. Our chess has ever been amateur and the steady growth of the game as a recreation is a source of pride to American players. With or without the master, its popularity is constantly widening, as is witnessed by the last tournament of the Western Association.

Failing utterly to show the form displayed against Perkins and Cass, J. H. Taft, jr., proved easy pickings for Alfred Schroeder in their match concluded before the Brooklyn Chess Clubduring the past week. The games follow:
